

The Reservoir Plan (Booth 5)

(/initiative/4Wjt/the-reservoir-plan-booth-5)

This is a plan to build four new reservoirs in the County, so that each Supervisorial District would have a reservoir that can serve in a similar fashion as Loch Lomond as an emergency water supply, source for ground water percolation, and recreational area.

No new dams.

Ok, but who is going to let you build one dam opposed to four? Remember you have the environmentalists to deal with on all these projects.

I think my Recycle plan is the best plan and will solve most of the County's water issues, and there are several, like this one that I think should still be planned in the future, but not as urgent as recycling water. I'm full aware that of the environmental concerns, but the reality is what we have done over the past 30 years is worse, especially over drafting the ground water. We have to keep showing environmentalists theses facts, and force them to realize that a reservoir like Loch Lomond could of been created naturally by a large landslide and not really that harmful for the environment. If such a landslide occurred, would they want it removed? I guess my point is, is that environmentalists that are against dams no matter what need to be legally challenged, not avoided.
